1. WHAT IS AN INTERNSHIP?

Because the parties involved in the internship process—students, colleges and universities, and employers—have differing objectives, it is critical to have a definition of “internship” upon which all parities can agree on. Currently, the term “internship” is used to describe various experiences. Moreover, there are no guidelines by which employers, educators, and students can consistently define “internships.” To establish uniformity in the use and application of the term “internships,” the UTSA Career Center in conjunction with NACE will use the following definition:

> An internship is a form of experiential learning that integrates knowledge and theory learned in the classroom, enables the student to gain practical experience as a professional under conditions conducive to educational development, an internship introduces the student the transition from college to work and a well structured internship program should help facilitate that transition. Furthermore, the internship experience should allow the student to network in professional fields they are considering for career paths, allow an opportunity for personal professional development, and give employers the opportunity to guide and evaluate talent.

HOW DO INTERNSHIPS BENEFIT EMPLOYERS?

- Year round source of highly motivated pre-professionals
- Students bring new perspectives to old problems
- Visibility of your organization is increased on campus
- Quality candidates to assist in diversity recruitment efforts
- Freedom for professional staff to pursue more creative projects
- Flexible, cost-effective work force not requiring a long-term employer commitment
- Proven, cost-effective way to recruit and evaluate potential employees
- Your image in the community is enhanced as you contribute your expertise to the educational experience to our students.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

Will you pay the intern? Wages vary widely from field to field, so make sure yours are competitive or offer competitive incentives.

Where will you put the intern? Do you have adequate workspace for them? Will you help him or her make parking arrangements, commuting arrangements, etc.?

What sort of academic background and experience do you want in an intern? Decide on standards for quality beforehand — it’ll help you narrow down the choices and find the best candidates.

Who will have the primary responsibility for the intern? Will that person be a mentor or merely a junior manager gaining management experience?

What will the interns be learning? Be as specific as possible. Interns, like others in the process of learning need structure so they don’t become lost, confused or bored.

Do you have an Internship Program in your workplace? The Career Center will provide you with an Internship Program Packet to assist you in developing a successful program.

How Do I Recruit An Intern?

How will you find those ideal candidates to fill your internship position(s)? The number-one tip from those who have established programs is to get out there early! This cannot be overemphasized to companies that want the very best interns. Begin searching three to four months before you need a student to begin. Starting early has other advantages: the longer you accept applications, the better your chance of finding the best person for the job. The sooner you get one, the longer you have to build a good working relationship with the intern.

RECRUITMENT
Recruiting interns at the University of Texas at San Antonio is very easy. There are career counselors as well as Career Services staff members who are very familiar with students seeking internships. By contacting our On Campus Recruiter, you will receive hands-on assistance throughout the entire recruiting process. In addition refer to the Employer Handbook to receive insight of the many ways you can participate with the Career Center.

Remember; choose your interns just as carefully as you’d choose permanent employees. After all, they might be permanent employees some day. You’re making an investment. Time and money will go into this person, and they won’t pay off if they go into a flawed vessel. This is where the interview will come in handy: Is the intern truly motivated, or just wants a job? Will the intern fit into your corporate culture? Does the intern have the level of experience you need? With careful consideration of whom to hire at the beginning, you can avoid some of the most common pitfalls of internships.
UTSA Career Service Internship Program

2. Introduction

An internship program should have an established learning outcome for the prospective student. It must address the needs of both the interns and the company. The internship program should introduce to the student the transition from college to work and a well structured internship program should help facilitate that transition. Experiential learning is an indispensable and valuable element for all students. An internship enables the student to gain practical experience as a professional under conditions conducive to educational development. Furthermore, the internship experience should allow the student to use their skills, allow an opportunity for personal development, and most importantly it should be an enjoyable experience.

2.1 Headcount Planning

More than any single elements, organization and consistency are critical to the success of your internship program. Before you even sit down to work on the development of your internship program there are some basic elements that you must establish to help you start your program’s organization.

1. Establish contact with recruiters
2. Determine optimal recruiting window
3. Who—How many of each type (by major, level in school, skills) will be needed?
   What—are your targeted campuses and events that you will recruit?
   Where—in what geographic locations will the interns work?
   When—when will the interns be needed?
4. Communicate with your company headcount planners and remind them about hiring interns, and finalize your intern count

2.2 Eligibility

Who is your intended target population? What criteria should the prospective intern be aware of (major, GPA, skills, etc.)? This is the portion where the company will define the qualifications of all potential interns. The qualifications of an intern should coincide with their job description and the goals of the company. The University Career Center can assist you in setting up a Rowdy Job account.

2.3 Time Requirement

The intern should have a detail timeline of how many hours the entire internship will consist of. Is this internship offered in the fall, spring, and summer? Be aware of how long a semester is at the student’s institution and plan your weekly hours accordingly with the intern’s school schedule.

Example:
During the fall or spring semester, twenty-four (24) hours a week for one full semester (15 weeks) must be spent at the placement organization for a total of 360 hours. During the summer semester, thirty-six (36) hours a week (10 weeks) must be spent at the placement organization for a total of 360 hours.
The student is expected to adhere to agreed-upon agency work schedules and administrative policies. Failure to participate in scheduled work activities (i.e. evenings or weekends) will result in termination of the internship.

2.4 Advisement

The internship provides the student opportunities to learn to deal with problems which arise from work duties and interpersonal relationships. If a situation or questions arise regarding the student’s role or responsibilities, the intern is encouraged to discuss concerns with the site supervisor and the university supervisor. If the intern and site supervisor are unable to reach an understanding acceptable to both parties, the university supervisor will meet with them to help reach a solution. However, the intern site has the ultimate saying in how the situation will be handled.

The following problem-solving steps are a recommendation of how to proceed in the case there is a conflict between intern and company:

1. If the intern encounters a problem with the sponsoring organization, it is the intern’s responsibility to attempt to resolve the problem with the site supervisor, and to inform the university supervisor of the problem immediately by email.

2. If the site supervisor identifies a problem with the intern’s performance, the problem should be documented, shared with the student, and forwarded to the university supervisor.

3. If the problem cannot be resolved through a conference between the intern and site supervisor, the university supervisor will arrange a three-way conference to address the problem.

4. In the event that a mutually agreeable solution cannot be found, the university supervisor may initiate an alternative placement for the intern if time is permissible. This however may delay the completion date of the internship.
3. Explanation of Internship

In this portion the employer will define the intern’s job description, provide an outline of the internship program, discuss financial considerations, and finally include an evaluation/assessment of the intern’s performance during their internship experience. This is the infrastructure of your program. The organization and consistency will reflect on the outcome of your program.

3.1 Job Description

Do you know what your interns are doing? Ensure to the potential intern that they will be getting the career-related experience they seek by being clear and concise in their job description. The job description should be relevant to do professional-level work in your organization as well as test the individual’s ability.

3.2 Internship Program Work plan

This is the road map that your interns will follow. The outline is a tentative agenda or syllabus for the student to follow on a day to day basis. Most students are used to structure from their classroom setting. They like to have an idea of what to expect day by day or week by week.

3.3 Financial Considerations

Internship experiences are designed to provide the student the opportunity for professional experiences and should be selected on the basis of their educational quality. The internship may be a paid experience. The university supervisor must be informed in advance if an intern student is accepting payment for fulfilling the required internship hours. If you choose not to pay them, you will want to check the U.S. Department of Labor’s guidelines and requirements regarding non-paid students and consult with your organization’s legal counsel (Internship Programs under the Fair Labor Standards Act). On the other hand, if you do decide to pay an intern they must be paid in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. However, the sponsoring organization is expected to reimburse the intern for expenses incurred in fulfilling their duties (i.e. assigned travel, assigned attendance at workshops, etc.) if outside of the Bexar county area. Additional uncertain costs should be discussed between the site supervisor and the intern in advance of the internship. Any financial compensation to the intern student should not alter how the internship is evaluated.

3.4 LEGAL ISSUES

3.4.1 Do you have to pay interns?

You don’t have to pay interns who qualify as leaders/trainees. The U.S. Department of Labor has outlined six criteria for determining trainee status:

1. The training, even though it includes actual operation of the facilities of the employer, is similar to what would be given in a vocational school or academic educational instruction.
2. The training is for the benefit of the trainees.
3. The trainees do not displace regular employees, but work under their close observation.
4. The employer that provides the training derives no immediate advantage form the activities of the trainees, and on occasion the employer’s operations may actually be impeded.
5. The trainees are not necessarily entitled to a job at the conclusion of the training period.
6. The employer and the trainees understand that the trainees are not entitled to wages for the time spent in training.

3.4.2 Workers’ and Unemployment Compensation
Workers’ compensation boards have found that interns contribute enough to a company to make them employees. It’s wise to cover interns under your workers’ compensation policy even though you aren’t required to do so. Student interns are not generally eligible for unemployment compensation at the end of the internship.

3.4.3 Other Considerations
Even if students are working through a school program for which they are being “paid” in college credits, the students still have the right, under the FLSA, to be paid unless the employer is not deriving any immediate advantage by using them. Paid interns make ideal workers — hungry to learn, eager to make a good impression and willing to perform and exceed expectations. The relatively small amount of money employers spend on internship wages and benefits is a good investment, because it often produces future, long-term employees. The employer should identify the specific terms and conditions of employment (e.g. dates of employment as intern, including date internship will end; compensation; organizational and/or reporting relationships; principal duties, tasks or responsibilities; working conditions; any other expectations of the employer), and should discuss these with the prospective intern, so that there is no misunderstanding regarding the relationship.

Also, it may make good sense to document such a discussion with a written agreement setting forth both parties’ understandings, and have it signed by both the employer and the intern. If an intern is harassed at your organization, and you don’t do anything about it, your organization opens itself to the risk of lawsuits. Take time to advise your interns of appropriate workplace behavior, the organization’s harassment policy and complaint procedures.

3.4.4 International Students
The most common visa types employers will see on college campuses, when recruiting international undergraduate or graduate students for either full-time or internship positions are the F-1 and J-1 visas.

“An F-1 visa is granted to a person coming to the United States to attend a college, university, seminary, conservatory, academic high school, elementary school, or other academic institution or language training program approved by the U.S. Attorney General for study by foreign students. The visa holder plans to return home after completing studies. This is the most common non-immigrant visa for an international student attending undergraduate and graduate school. Students are granted F-1 status until the completion of the academic program and 12 months of post-program practical training.

The purpose of the F-1 visa is to provide an opportunity for study in the United States. Anything outside of study, including employment, is an exception to the visa. Authorization for employment is strictly limited to certain situations. The student holding F-1 status for a full academic year and in good academic standing may work off campus. Such work authorization is granted when the student has sustained unforeseen economic hardship. Also, the student may not work for more than 20 hours per week when school is in session, but may work full time during holidays and vacations, including breaks between terms, provided the student intends to register for the next school term.
3.45 Curricular Practical Training: An F-1 student may perform curricular practical training prior to the completion of the educational program as part of his or her educational experience. The INS defines this type of training as “alternate work/study, internship, cooperative education, or any other type of required internship or practicum that is offered by sponsoring employers through agreements with the school.”

3.46 Post-Completion Practical Training: This is temporary employment directly related to the student’s major area of study that takes place after the student completes a full course of study. Authorization for this training may be granted for a maximum of 12 months of full-time or part-time work. Those on a student visa can only gain authorization once for this type of training.”

3.5 Intern Orientation
A great way to introduce your internship outline is during an Intern Orientation session. For students, an orientation serves as an information delivery meeting and a bonding experience to becoming acquainted with fellow interns and staff. Intern orientation should be held on the students’ first day of work, and should not be an optional event. An orientation will get the interns off to a good start and help avoid misunderstandings during the work term. Knowing what to expect in advance, will be beneficial for both the coordinator and student. It allows the student to prepare for upcoming learning modules or workshops and it will eliminate any confusion to the intern about the company’s deadlines that will be required from the intern.

3.6 Evaluation
Evaluation is an essential and critical component to the success of an internship program. The evaluation will help the coordinator improve and enhance the program and determine what works and what doesn’t. An evaluation is also the component that the employer can rely on to assess interns and consider for regular, full-time employment. In order to ensure a productive intern, is to have consistent contact with him or her, either in groups or one-on-one, throughout their work term. One thing to remember is that the students are carrying the story of their experience with your company back to campus, and the company has a high stake for retention and future interns that the story is a positive one.

Include the following in the evaluation process:
- Intern feedback
- Intern reports/ projects
- Exit interview
- Manager evaluations
4. TEN CONCERNS OF INTERNS

1. Give us real work!
It can’t be said too many times that interns want to work and learn. An internship can help you get a job done that you couldn’t otherwise, right? If you’ve brought on an intern as a recruitment tool, then how will you be able to assess their abilities? It just makes sense to utilize your interns well.

2. Do what you say, and say what you do!
Be honest with your interns about what they can expect during their internship. If the job will require stuffing some envelopes, then make that clear. But if you tell the intern they will be researching a project, and they spend 90% of their time doing “grunt work,” then bad feelings will develop. Honesty doesn’t cost you anything, and it will make the interns feel that much more respected.

3. We like feedback!
Remember that interns are students, and they may not have the business skills and experiences that you take for granted. If your intern makes an oversight, just pull him or her aside and explain how the situation should be handled in the future.

4. We want to be included too!
Is there a staff meeting that they can attend? Can they quietly tag along to that next project meeting? Headed to lunch with a couple of people in the office? Please include them in the daily life of your workplace. After all, if you provide a little more perspective on the intern’s work, the product will be much better.

5. Please explain.
When you assign work, make sure you give a detailed explanation. While the work may seem trivial and obvious to you, it may not be obvious to someone who’s never done it before. Patience and a few extra minutes at the beginning will pay off later when your intern can produce good work independently.

6. I want a mentor!
Make sure that interns have a mentor or supervisor to provide guidance. Make it someone who truly likes to teach, and the experience will be even better.

7. A minute of your time please.
The best mentor in the world is useless if he or she can’t or won’t spend the necessary time mentoring. As newcomers, interns may not speak up if they’re feeling ignored, so the burden of making sure they’re okay is on the mentor. If the busiest person in the office wants to be the designated mentor, he or she should schedule regular times to meet with the intern.

8. Be prepared!
That wonderful day has arrived and the intern goes to start their internship only to learn that no one knew they were coming, and there is no place for them to work.
9. Um...I need a chair.
It is amazing how many employers hire an intern and don’t think about the fact that they will need a desk, chair, phone, and a computer in order to do the task assigned. It is no fun, and not efficient to move an intern from desk to desk as people are out one day to the next. If you want to get a job done, you need to supply the intern with the tools to do the job.

10. Show me the money (as best you can)
Each internship is different, and each industry has its own personality, remember that interns have expenses. Your organization may not be in a position to pay much, but anything can help. Maybe you can help pay for their parking, take them to lunch every so often, or develop some other creative way to assist them.

Use the key below to rate your intern on Work Performance Areas and Developmental Areas.

5=Outstanding. Performance is without question superior, and all standards and objectives have been clearly exceeded. Interns whose performance puts them in the Outstanding category serve as examples to their peers. Initiative and leadership are clearly exhibited.

4=Exceeds Expectations. Performance is clearly and indisputably above average, with all standards and objectives having been met and a substantial number of the objectives having been exceeded.

3=Meets Expectations. Performance is totally acceptable, with standards and objectives for the internship having been met. Represents the performance level expected from most of our interns.

2=Needs Improvement. Performance is below the standards expected. Below average performance that lacks appropriate professional and personal attitudes and/or technical skills. Exhibits deficiencies that could prevent advancement unless corrected.

1=Does not meet expectations. Performance fails to meet minimum standards, and the intern should not be asked back.
