Question	Answer
How many work study jobs are available for students? (question from student Itza Carbajal)	There are approximately 635 work-study positions for Fall and Spring and 400 for Summer. This website provides answers to many commonly asked questions such as how to qualify for work study, how to apply for work study jobs, etc. http://www.utsa.edu/financialaid/workstudystudents.html
Are there scholarship opportunities for full-time working students as well? (question from student Steven Sano)	Financial Aid does not know of any scholarships with this particular criterion, however, students should look into the general scholarship listing to see what they might be eligible for. General Scholarship list and applications can be found on this website: http://www.utsa.edu/scholarships/
Are there non-need based programs in the College of Sciences for students to be able to participate in undergraduate research? (question from student Yasmin Asgari)	There are limited undergraduate research assistant opportunities primarily because the job classification is "Graduate Research Assistant." Each college makes the determination of specific hiring needs and therefore, it is recommended that students check with their college for more information on such employment opportunities.
Research possibility for students to log onto Air Rowdy one time rather than every time	Ken Pierce-Pending
Is there a way to notify students they have copy/print money remaining on their cards?	Ken Pierce-Pending
Who is the contact person for SI (Supplemental Instruction)?	Margaret Floyd is the Associate Director for Supplemental Instruction. She has an active student survey out now. Margaret.Floyd@utsa.edu (210) 458-7116
