Contemporary Chinese art is generally recognized as artwork created after cultural revolution (i.e. post 1976). It is interpreted through political and social perspectives. This lecture provides an outline of the evolution of contemporary Chinese art highlighting the influence of political and societal factors along with the impacts of international art markets.