Frequently Asked Questions

What testing does Livingston Med Lab administer? What does the test show?

Livingston Med Lab administers a PCR (Polymerase chain reaction) test for COVID-19. The test can tell whether someone has the virus very early on, even if they don't have symptoms. This test is only for the COVID-19 virus. It will not detect the presence of any other viruses or diseases.

Please note that this test only detects the presence or absence of the virus at the time it is administered. It is possible to have a negative test and later contract the virus.

How is the test to be administered?

During the test, a technician will insert a special cotton swab in both sides of your nose and move it around for about 15 seconds. It won't hurt, but it might be uncomfortable. The technician sends the swab to a lab to test the material from inside your nose.

Are my results shared with anyone?

If your test is negative, the results will be shared with you and Student Health Services (for students) or Occupational Health (for faculty and staff).

If your test is positive, the results will be shared with you and Student Health Services (for students) or Occupational Health (for faculty and staff). Your name will be forwarded to San Antonio Metro Health, as required by health officials. UTSA will assist Metro Health with contact tracing.
